The Institute has set for itself a pre-eminent role with the above motto. The sheer scale, scope, and potential impact that India will have on 21st century business makes us believe that this is a legitimate aspiration.

The Demand for Project Management Professionals

A project is a time-bound and unique endeavour undertaken to produce a product, service, or result defined by specific goals and objectives to bring about beneficial change or add value.

Project Management is the process of planning and executing efforts to achieve all project goals within given primary constraints of scope, time, and resources.

According to the Project Management Job Growth and Talent Gap Report – 2017-2027 by PMI, the global economy has become more project-oriented as the practice of project management expands across industries. Opportunities also arise as organisations increasingly rely on technologies and the projects needed to support them. Across the globe, there's a widening gap between employers' need for skilled project management workers and the availability of professionals to fill those roles. A PMI-commissioned talent gap analysis by Anderson Economic Group (AEG) points to outstanding opportunities in jobs and career growth for project managers globally.

Nearly

88 million

project management-oriented roles by 2027

Over

of total jobs accounted for by China & India

Demand is high for practitioners with the necessary mix of competencies — a combination of technical and leadership skills, plus strategic and business management. Being abreast of contemporary knowledge and global best practices in Project Management is critical for career growth and success.

Project Management Scope in India

The world, and India in particular, is undergoing tremendous changes, and it is an era of innovation. The Indian government has planned and announced major policy initiatives such as 'Make in India', 'SMART Cities', 'Stand-Up India', 'Digital India', and mega infrastructure development projects like ports, railways, airports, highways, etc. As technology is evolving and Industry 4.0 evolves and expands, new-age business models and rising consumer expectations are fuelling a tremendous demand for skilled and certified project management professionals across all industry verticals. Thus, project management is also of significant importance to nation-building.

The Economic Times has cited a report by PMI saying that India is the fastest-growing market for Project Management-oriented employment. As per the report, by 2027, India will have the second-largest number of project management-oriented jobs in the world only behind China.

The trend is clear, and it is a clarion call for working professionals who are currently in project management roles, or others wishing to transition into such roles, to upgrade and upskill themselves with knowledge and skills benchmarked to global standards, in this critical and growing field.

Programme Overview

Regardless of industry size, project-driven or not, companies (core as well as ITeS) can leverage project management capability into a competitive advantage by completing work on time and within a budget in an environment that reinforces alignment with organisational strategy. The non-repetitive, irreversible nature of these activities and sizeable capital investments make the knowledge of scientific and advanced skills mandatory for the proper management of projects. The challenges have only been enhanced further due to digital technologies as well as the COVID-19 pandemic. For example, understanding software project management is a critical success factor, along with technical skills for IT architects.

Anup R. Mahindrakar

I have 14 years of experience in the IT industry. This course has provided me the knowledge and confidence to take up higher role and responsibilities. This interactive programme taught many of the Project Management concepts in simple methods which were otherwise difficult to understand. Case study and their analysis provided the learnings from real-time scenario, from different sectors with different strategies, approaches to analyse a particular problem and recommended solution. Working in groups taught us team management, people management, and understanding of the situation from other's perspective. Simulation component enhanced the learning and decision-making skills necessary for project execution, monitoring and controlling that is similar to real-time experiences. In a nutshell, this programme was altogether a wonderful learning experience and it offered more than my expectations. I'd highly recommend this programme to my friends and colleagues who wish to make their career in Project Management.
