Sri Aurobindo's Influences on Women Nationalist Movement

Abstract:

This article examines how Sri Aurobindo's nationalist ideology influenced the political engagement of women in the Indian independence movement, particularly in the early twentieth century. Rather than analysing nationalism as abstract political thought, the study investigates how Aurobindo's ideas were translated into concrete forms of women's participation across cultural, organisational, and mass political arenas. Through historical analysis of figures such as Sarala Devi Choudhurani, Sister Nivedita, Swarnakumari Devi, and Basanti Devi, the paper explores how women operating in diverse contexts intersected with the ideological environment shaped by Aurobindo's writings and revolutionary activities.
